MOSCOW - The Soviet Union's top sports official, Marat Gramov, said Monday that Mos-cow's decision to pull out of the 1984 summer Olympic games in Los Angeles was irrevocable. This decision of ours is final,"

he said at a news conference. [President Ronald Reagan, speaking later at an informal press conference in Washington, said he did not think there was "any action that I could take that would be prudent to get the Russians to return to the Games, The Associated Press reported.

Lieutenant Thomas Jefferson, spokesman at police headquarters in Pretoria, said a policeman, Andries Nel, was seriously wounded when he was shot in the head while trying to stop the guernillas as they drove away from the Mobil Oil refinery. He was later reported in satisfactory condition.

Another policeman was slightly wounded by fragments of a gre-nade thrown by the fugitives at a roadblock set up near the refinery, Lieutenant Jefferson said. Two other policemen who took up the pursuit after the guerrillas turned away from the roadblock were slightly injured when a bullet shattered their windshield.

The spokesman said the at-tackers fired three rocket-propelled grenades at the refinery, starting a fire and causing limited damage. A refinery official said no storage tanks were hit and that the blaze

MX Defeat Would Encourage Moscow To Ignore Arms Efforts, Reagan Says

By Robert C. Siner International Herald Tribune

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan warned Congress on Monday that scrapping the MX missile would encourage the Soleckmail" and ignore U.S. arms control

In a short statement, Mr. Reagan said that "there is no more compelling priority on my agenda" than production of the MX.

Funding for 30 of the missiles faces a vote in the House of Representatives this week. The House speaker, Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., Democrat of Massachusetts, has predicted that money for the 10warhead intercontinental ballistic missile will be stripped from the military authorization bill.

"We cannot afford to delay any longer," Mr. Reagan said. "Without the Peacekeeper, the MX, the incentive for the Soviets to return to the negotiating table is greatly bring them back." Responding to another question. Mr. Reagan said, "What have we done to the Soviets that can compare to any of the things they are presently doing, except tell them that we're not going to let them get so powerful that they can impose nuclear blackmail on us and that we are willing to meet them in arms reductions to the point of total disarmament if they are willing." Regarding El Salvador, Mr. Reagan denied assertions by Senator Jesse Helms, Republican of North Carolina, that the United States used money and influence to assist Jose Napoleon Duarte. El Salvador's newly elected president, in his campaign. There was no "attempt by any agency of the U.S. government to participate in partisan fashion in that election," he said. However, Mr. Reagan said that there had been aid, "overt not covert," to labor unions and trade associations under the framework of the Reagan administration's program aimed at promoting democracy in the country. Mr. Reagan also said that a bi-

STUTTGART - About 13,000 metalworkers went on strike in the ndustrial area around Stuttgart Monday and their union announced that it would widen the walkout to Frankfurt next week, 2 move that could force a shutdown of West Germany's automotive in-

The strike by IG Metall, West Germany's biggest union, was called in support of its demand for a 35-hour workweek. Union officials said Monday's walkout affected about 14 factories near here, many involved in manufacturing car components, the first such strike in West Germany since 1978. Union officials said all members obeyed the strike order and picketing proceeded without incident. Employers, meanwhile, rejected an appeal by the union's chairman, Hans Mayr, to resume bargaining. They have refused to discuss any cut in the standard 40-hour week.

Escalation of the dispute trig-gered a steep slide in share prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange. Robert Bosch, one of the biggest European manufacturers of car betteries, ignition systems and elec-trical equipment, headed the list of Monday's strike targets. Others incinded West Germany's two big-gest makers of pistons. Kolbensch-

The house is the U.S. ambassador's new residence, And as Secretary of State George P. Shultz recently concluded, it is it. 19 years after the project started, "a mess." How it got that way is now the subject of an audit by the State Department Inspector General's office in Washington that could lead to legal action against an Egyptian contrac-tior and possibly others involved in the project. The residence has already cost more than $3.5 million and will require another $930,000 to complete. Since its inception in 1965, the project has faced staggering political and practical challenges. According to former U.S. ambassadors to Egypt, the property and its once-splendid Turkish-style home in Giza, near Cairo, was bought in the mid-1960s. After Cairo and /ashington severed diplomatic relations in 1967, planning

r the residence was halted. The lease on what was then the ambassador's residence, a ented house in Cairo, was not renewed. When diplomatic relations were restored in 1973, plans to develop the Giza property were revived. But President Anwar Sadat then expressed an interest in the land. In the spring of 1974 Secretary of State Henry A. Kissin-

Reagan administration officials said the State Department's Foreign Building Office, charged with building and maintaining U.S. buildings overseas, would normally have chosen an architect from three recommended by an advisory panel of private architects. But in this case, Metcall & Associates, a Washington-based company, was selected, mostly because it had done much design work in Egypt and was willing to accept payment in Egyptian pouzds, officials

As the structure rose, with its 14-foot (4.2-meter) concrete wall, so did the level of protests and ridicule in Egypt. Moreover, the construction contract, like that for the design work, called for payment in Egyptian pounds rather than dollars. This meant, first, that only two companies, both local, bid for the job. Second, since the design required hich dollars had to be paid, parts became more expensive. This, according to Senate staff sides, led in some cases to use of substandard, locally available components by the Egyptian contractor, El Abd of Masdi. The company, despite repeated efforts, could not be reached for comment. The plumbing was installed so quickly that pressure tests were not conducted before the walls were scaled. Subsequent

U.S. Aviation Safety Is Questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board told Congress on Monday that recent "unsettling incidents" have caused concern that airline deregulation may lead to a compromise of aviation safety.

"In terms of statistics, there has been no decline in aviation safety" since deregulation was enacted by Congress in 1978, James E. Burnett Jr. of the independent agency testified. But he pointed to "some very unsettling incidents in the past year which have caused the board concern over the adequacy of surveillance over the industry" by the Federal Aviation Administration. He added that "increasing competition which results in cost-cutting measures" was the cause.

As examples, Mr. Burnett mentioned incidents in which planes where nearly disched or ran dangerously low on fuel last year, and the crash in October of an Air Illinois plane that took 10 lives. "We uncovered a laundry list of maintenance and operational procedures which were not carried out by the book," he said. Mr. Burnett and the transportation board's vice chairman, Patricia A. Goldman, appeared before the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee on their nominations

U.S. Sentences Spy to Life in Prison

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - James Durward Harper Jr., who pleaded guilty to selling U.S. missile secrets to Communist agents, was sentenced Monday to life in prison by a judge who called him a traitor.

U.S. District Judge Samuel Conti said Mr. Harper had never expressed regret for his crimes. The judge said he would recommend that he never be paroled, calling him "a traitor to this country." The government alleged that Mr. Harper sold the documents to Polish agents for $250,000 to $1 million and that the Poles delivered the information to Soviet

Mr. Harper, 49, a computer technician, had pleaded not guilty in December to six charges of stealing Minuteman missile secrets and papers outlining the U.S. ability to survive a nuclear attack. Under the plea bargain, Mr. Harper agreed to testify about others involved in the case.

Cuba's Grenada Envoys Fall Into Obscurity

Havana Blames Its Reversal on Island On Shoddy Diplomatic Reporting

By Joseph B. Treaster New York Times Service

HAVANA - The two senior Cuban officials in Grenada at the time of the U.S.-led invasion of the island last fall have quietly dropped out of sight and are apparently in disgrace, Western diplomats here say. Neither Julian Torres Rizo, the Cuban ambassador to Grenada at the time, nor Colonel Pedro Tortolo Comas, who was sent to Gre-nada shortly before the invasion to shore up the defenses of the nearly 800 Cubans who were building an airfield on the island, have been seen at official functions in months, the diplomats say.

Middle-level Cuban officials said they did not know where the two men were now and requests to talk with senior Cuban officials

The diplomats say that another Cuban Foreign Service officer, Oscar Oswaldo Cardenas, the former Cuban ambassador to Suriname. has also fallen into disfavor because of events related to the turmoil in Grenada.

Mr. Cardenas, the diplomats said, is believed to be working now at a low-level job in the Interior

Neither Mr. Torres Rizo nor Mr. Tortolo was present at the ceremo-24 Cubans who were killed by U.S. troops in Grenada, according to the diplomats. They were also absent at the annual May Day parade in Havana, Both events were attended by President Fidel Castro and most senior government and party officials.

The diplomats discount rumors that Mr. Torres Rizo and Mr. Tortolo are under house arrest. Both have apparently been assigned to obscure posts. One diplomat said he had heard that Mr. Tortolo had been made deputy director of a military school in the interior of Cuba, while Mr. Torres Rizo was now working at a "very technical" position in the Foreign Ministry.

By some accounts, Grenada, under the leadership of Prime Minis-ter Maurice Bishop, had become almost a Cuban surrogate, with Mr.
Torres Rizo being consulted on most important decisions.

But in mid-September last year, as the central committee of the ruling New Jewel Movement forced Mr. Bishop to share power with his deputy prime minister, Bernard Coard, something began to go wrong with Cuba's diplomatic re-division between Grenada's leaders. It was caught in surprise when Mr. Bishop was slain and General Hudson Austin, the commander of Grenada's army, formed a revolutionary council to run the island.

President Castro later told a reporter that Cuba's representatives in Grenada "had absolutely no idea what was happening."

Some Western diplomats say they find it difficult to believe that the Cuban ambassador was un-aware of developments in so tiny a country as Grenada, which has a population of only about 100,000, and where politics are the preserve of a small clite.

The diplomats suggest that Mr. Torres Rizo might have been reluc-tant to be the bearer of bad news to President Castro about the Cuban leader's close friend, Mr. Bishop.

Alternatively, the ambassador might have been reporting accurately and in full detail, but the disappointing developments were not being imparted to Mr. Castro by officials in Cuba who either doubted the news or sought to shield their president from it.

Shortly before his death, Mr. Bishop met with Mr. Castro in Cuba and indicated that there were growing political problems in Grenada, according to a diplomat, cit-ing an official who attended the

Both officials were at the airfield when U.S. paratroopers began landing. Following Mr. Castro's orders for the Cubans to defend their positions to the end, Mr. Diaz stood firm and was killed. Mr. Tortolo, however, fled to the safety of the Soviet Embassy.

Already, the far right is taking advantage of that history to play on the fears of many Salvadorans. In the press and on radio, the rightists are challenging his election and casting Mr. Duarte as the enemy of private enterprise and a pupper of could successfully contest the results, and they expect Mr. Duarte to be sworn in June 1. To the far rightists, Mr. Duarte is a rebel, a man intent on destroying a system that for so long worked to their advantage. But even middle-class and lower-class Salvadorans are leary of him — the former be-cause they are afraid of losing what little they have; the latter because they are afraid of the violence that his efforts at change have brought.

To the leftist insurgents, Mr. Duarte is a pawn of the United States and a food to believe that the traditional rulers in El Salvador will share power with a civilian

While the examples usually given to illustrate Mr. Duarte's more liberal tendencies are generally taken from 1980 to 1982, his reputation as a political rebel began during his three successive terms as mayor of San Salvador.

It is during these years in the 1960s that be adopted the theory of "communitarism." The doctrine essentially seeks to decentralize power held by a few authorities and give it to the populace.

When the traditional decisionmakers objected to a project, Mr. Duarte called on residents to protest. It showed Salvadorans for the first time that they could affect government decisions through political action. It was a revolutionary concept, and even some middle-class Salvadorans who had supported Mr.

The traditional rulers were threated because decision-making power was being taken out of their hands. But many Salvadorans who had never held power also were copardized because to ask for a role in government became tantamount to putting their lives in dan-

The far right's characterization of Mr. Duarte as a U.S. pupper also plays on the distrust upper-class Salvadorans have of the United States and doubts about Washington's willingness to support the changes it keeps suggesting. This distrist stems primarily from the economic tailspin that be-gan in El Salvador after the United States insisted on economic re-forms after the 1979 coup.

Salvadoran leaders were told, "If you go through with the reforms, the United States is going to help you," said a U.S. official. "Land reform will nail communism to the wall," some rightists recall the United States promising.

Mr. Duarte believed and acted on those promises, but the economic aid that was expected never arrived Senator Jesse Helms, Republican of North Carolina.
introduced a bill in Congress that prohibited U.S. aid from paying Salvadoran landowners for their expropriated property.

At the same time, the world prices for coffee and other Salvadoran commodities began to fall in 1980, and not enough U.S. aid was forthcoming to prevent the reces-sion that has left 40 percent of the people jobless.

Despite Mr. Duarte's pledge that there will be no more economic reforms, there is fear among busiessmen that what they have could be taken away.

Thousands of Libvans rallied in Tripoli to celebrate Colonel Moamer Qadhafi's escape from an attempted assassination. The Libyan leader himself was absent from the demonstration.

Political, Security Reasons Are Seen In Qadhafi's Failure to Attend Rally

By Jonathan C. Randal

Washington Post Service TRIPOLI. Libya - Colonel Moamer Qadhafi, the Libyan leader, failed to show up at a mass rally celebrating his escape from an assassination attempt last week. Speculation attributed his decision to both security and political considerations.

The rally on Sunday at Green Square near the Mediterranean waterfront passed noisily, but without what Colonel Qadhafi's aides earlier had suggested would be an appearance followed by demonstrations outside the British and Tunisian embassies.

At the rally, attended by as many as 20,000, predominantly young people, Britain, Tunisia, the United States and Sudan again were de-nounced for their alleged roles in the still-mysterious gun battle last last year after escaping capture for Tuesday less than a mile from Colonel Qadhafi's army barracks

Symptomatic of his foreign po-licy problems, and of his highly developed instinct for self-preservation, was his offer Friday to pull out of Chad "immediately" if France agreed to remove the 3,000 troops it sent there last August to block Libya's force of 6,000.

[France is studying the proposal, officials in Paris said Monday, according to Reuters. The French minister of European affairs. Roland Dumas, said Sunday night that it "effectively contains proposals on the withdrawal of Libyan troops from Chad. It's an important event. In any case it's a new development which may constitute an opening, a hope for a return to a more normal situation in Chad."

Once before, in 1981, Colonel Qadhafi confounded his critics by withdrawing from Chad just when they were convinced he had bogged his army down irretrievably in a farlarger military operation there.

Domestically, Colonel Qadhafi's pursuit of reforms ran into embarrassing rejection from traditional Moslems in February during a session of the General People's Congress, the grass-roots parliament he has championed.

The congress rejected such proposals as obligatory military training for young women, greater right: for women in divorce cases and scuttling some grade-school classes in favor of mothers' instructing

But Westerners who visited the barracks after the incident said they saw no evidence of shooting. and the government has denied any such attack took place.

Libyan security was reported to have detained as many as 200 suspects after the shooting Tuesday, which reportedly claimed the lives of 60 soldiers and militiamen. Meanwhile, the Libvan press re-

Conflict Resolution Is Mushrooming As Academic Discipline in the U.S.

By Carol Krucoff Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - "We're going to start throwing bodies out the window," the man in the ski mask shouted into the intercom, pushing the amhassador to his knees and putting a gun to his head. "Someone's going to die."

On the other end of the line, the negotiator loosened his tie and took a deep breath. In the 20 minutes since a band of terrorists called to say they had taken the ambassador and his family hostage, the official had tried several tactics to defuse the situation.

Now he tried a stalling maneuver, saying soothingly into the in-tercom: "Are you comfortable! Can we get you anything to eat or

"That's it!" the terrorist yelled to a companion holding a gun on the ambassador's wife. "We're going to blow her head off!" A shot exploded. The ambassador's wife slumped over. That was quick, said Bryant Wedge, a social psychiatrist to a group of graduate students watching a videotape of the "Hostage Negotiation Role-Play" that they had enacted earlier in the course.

"John, I think it would have been better to repeat their demands back to them at that point." Mr. Wedge said to the retired U.S. Navy captain who had portrayed the State Department negotiator. "But you had the right idea - keep them talking. As long as they're talking they don't do anything."

Mock mediations between warring factions — be they bosses and workers, environmentalists and industrialists or husbands and wives -are a crucial part of the nation's first master's degree program in conflict intervention.

"We train military people by the tens of thousands and diplomats by the thousands," said Mr. Wedge. founder and director of George Mason University's Center for Conflict Resolution in Fairfax. Virginia. "Now we're finally teaching people how to wage peace."

Conflict resolution is one of the fastest-growing academic disciplines in the United States, with hundreds of workshops springing up around the country for lawyers. therapists, social workers and oth-schies. The study of conflict and how it is caused, prevented, managed and mushroomed in recent years with the fear that with nuclear weapons the traditional method of settling disputes - slugging it out - may leave neither victors nor spoils.

Mr. Wedge's efforts began in 1959 when he left Yale University. where he was chief psychiatrist at the department of university health, to accept an Eisenhower Exchange Fellowship. On a tour of 15 countries, he was invited to a party where officials of a U.S.-Soviet university exchange program were screaming at each other.

They were accusing each other of bad faith and sabotage. Mr. Wedge recalled, "when it was just a bloody misunderstanding. stepped in to help settle the dispute and realized "we like to think that those in high places know what they're doing and the world is safe. But from this close encounter I wasn't so sure."

"The traditional tendency to 'Call out the Marines' when conflict threatens to get nasty can leave you with a lot of dead marines." Mr. Wedge said. "But a skilled negotiator can turn a win-lose situation into a win-win situation. A true, honest broker can do things all the diplomacy and gunboat stuff can't touch.

George Mason's program is a prototype for the National Peace Academy, the subject of a bill co-sponsored by 54 U.S. senators and 169 U.S. representatives. The U.S. Academy of Peace Act would authorize $23.5 million to train Americans and leaders of other nations in "the art of conflict resolution without resort to violence."

But aides to Senator Howard H. Baker Jr., Republican of Tennessee, said he had no plans to schedule the bill, largely, its proponents ssert, because it is opposed by the White House.

The academy is "a new goody-tao-shoes boundoggle" proposed by the "Jane Fondas of the Senate." said Edwin Feulner, president of the Heritage Foundation, a conservative research organization. "It would have you believe a few courses in international hugging and kissing will turn even Yasser Arafat into a gentle little pussycat."

Those in favor of the bill counter that U.S. taxpayers support four military academies and five war colleges and contend that State Department opposition is prompted

The Threat to Sakharov

There is reason to suspect that at this moment the Soviet government is coolly and deliberately ensuring a mounting threat to the life of one of the great men of the 20th century. the physicist and peace activist Andrei Sakharov. The 62-year-old dissident is known to have begun a hunger strike more than a week ago at Gorki, where he lives in internal exile. His purpose was to mobilize international opinion to induce the Kremlin authorities to allow his wife, Yelena Bonner, to travel abroad briefly for medical and family purposes.

Mrs. Bonner herself has since been confined to Gorki - and reportedly has also begun a hunger strike -- so there is no reliable way for outsiders to keep track of the condition of her husband. But given the intense interest in Mr. Sakharov, it is hard to believe that the authorities would maintain the secrecy over Gozki if the threat to his life had been lifted.

Soviet officials profess outrage at the continued flow of foreign concern for one of their citizens. They find such concern provocative and essentially political in its character. In a sense the concern is disproportionate, but there is a reason: The Sakharovs and a few others have become in Western opinion the surrogates for all the brave individuals, known and unknown, who dare to assert the calls of conscience against the whims of Soviet power.

What the Kremlin has been doing to the Sakharovs is pure malice and vindictiveness— the policy of a petty, frightened power lacking in both decency and self-confidence. What imperatives of high policy require an ill woman to be vilified, harassed by the KGB and now denied the medical treatment and family companionship of her choice? What perverse considerations of national pride compel the Kremlin to make an example of its abuse of a Nobel peace laureate?

We observed last week that the moment of the Sakharovs' evident renewed distress was scarcely the time for America's National Academy of Sciences to resume the scientific exchanges it had cut off as a protest over mistreatment of its distinguished foreign associate. The academy's president, Frank Press, responded by saying, among other things, that exchange channels are needed "to communicate humanitarian concerns." Humanitarian concerns do need to be communicated - by the Soviet authorities. They need to stop their sickening harassment of the Sakharovs and to re-establish the couple's link with the outside world. The proper humanitarian contribution of American scientists is to suspend their exchange plans until the welfare of the Sakharovs is no longer in doubt.

Aid as Riot Insurance

Those food riots that rattled the Dominican Republic have also rattled Washington. Every-body concedes that more should have been done to bolster a democratic government before food prices jumped up in compliance with austerity terms for an IMF loan. The State Department has now scraped up $15 million in additional credits and Congress is considering $75 million more in aid. Why was this help not extended before Santo Domingo was shaken by the worst violence in a generation? One explanation is that foreign aid is so tangled in restrictions that it takes the skills of a safecracker to find and extract funds from various budgets. When the Dominican president, Salvador Jorge Blanco, visited Washington in April, the State Department scoured the cupboard for additional aid. It came up with $23.5 million in new aid — a feat we failed to acknowledge in an earlier comment (IHT, May 2) — bringing total aid to $133.5 million. But even that was well below the margin of safety. What especially might have helped him was not available: more food aid in the form of low-cost wheat, rice and corn. Because of worldwide food shortages, the bin was empty.

Although Congress wants to enlarge this $791million program by $175 million, passage has been snagged by extraneous amendments.
Still, every time the Reagan administration puts a high priority on an aid request, it somehow manages to find the money. When Grenada needed help, an extra $40 million was drawn from unused funds earmarked for Lebanon. When Congress stalled on aid to El Salvador, President Reagan announced his readiness to reach into contingency funds to keep the money flowing.

The Dominican Republic seemed stable, so its request did not reach the priority list. Emergency aid is viewed as disaster relief, not riot insurance. Thus, warnings that IMF conditions would cause unrest were ignored until they were proved correct. Until a better way is found to manage these adjustment loans, the same cycle will surely be repeated. Perhaps the Dominican lesson will add poignance and persuasiveness when hard-pressed aid officials plead for disaster insurance.

Other Opinion

Voting No on Salvador Violence

The people of El Salvador have paid for the country's ongoing civil war - a war that, without fomentation by the Soviet Union, Cuba and Nicaragua, would have flickered out long ago - with some 50,000 lives and the collapse of a promising economy. Amid this shattering crisis and in the face of threats and terror from left and right a majority of the electors have opted determinedly for democracy. They have had enough of violence and hope desperately for a middle way that will enable the country to break out of its blooddrenched stalemate.

- The Neue Zürcher Zeitung (Zurich).

High Stakes in the Philippines

The National Assembly election in the Philippines will be a test, but by no means a final one, of whether it is possible to restore healthy democracy to this nation torn by dissension and troubled by critical economic problems. There seems to be little doubt that President Marcos's New Society Movement will win a very comfortable majority. What is working in his favor is the evaporation of the unity among opposition parties that followed the assassination of the opposition leader Benigno Aquino. Fair elections are necessary to encourage the opposition to put its faith in the democratic process. If the Filipinos are angered by what they view as another rigged election, they may be inclined to seek violent means to achieve their political objectives. It is hoped that the National Assembly election will be conducted in a blameless fashion and thus truly become the first major move toward restoring full democracy. This would be in the best interests of the Filipino people. - The Japan Times (Tokyo).

Time for Democratic Unity

For Walter Mondale it is all over bar the doubting. The doubting is whether he can beat Ronald Reagan in November. But that is a problem for later. For now he can be satisfied that, despite a late flourish by Gary Hart in Indiana and Ohio, the Democratic nomination seems to be his. With just half a dozen primary elections to go, it would take an earthquake or a robbery to deny him the nomination.

So it is time for all good Democrats to sink their differences and coalesce behind Mr. Mondale in order to defeat the wicked Mr. Reagan in the autumn.

Getting [the Rev. Jesse] Jackson and his followers through the revolving door of the Democratic Party without at the same time expelling a lot of others is going to be a the task is worth attempting. Mr. Jackson has certainly brought many blacks into the political process for the first time and won the support of most black voters, both old and new. He is uniquely influential. The question he now has to face is whether he will lead his followers on into the mainstream. via the Democratic Party, or whether he will take them into a backwater of exclusiveness

- The Economist (London).

The Cold War Olympics

The issue clearly goes beyond the claptrap of anti-Soviet rallies in the United States, and the security of its athletes. Rumors of alternative games being staged in Sofia, Bulgaria, have been circulating since November, long before this security brouhaha exploded.

We hope that the Soviets will reconsider this ill-advised move. We hope, too, that the United States doesn't exacerbate the unhappy state of affairs by priming the pump of Cold War rhetoric. The United States should try to further accommodate the Soviet complaints.

- The Jakarta Post.

The hope that the U.S. boycott of the Moscow Olympic Games, and the successful U.S. pressure on some others to follow suit, were an aberration and that the Olympic movement would recover from the setback has been dashed by the Soviet decision to abstain from the forthcoming Olympiad at Los Angeles. It would, however, be pointless to accuse the Russians of injecting politics into sport. The association of the two has long been a fact of international life.

An amendment for the rejection of the bill was defeated by 133 votes to 123. The measure proposes to allow Jesuits and members of other religious orders connected with the Roman Catholic Church to reside and acquire property in the United Kingdom. It also proposes to enable Roman Catholics to hold the officers of Lord Chancellor of Great Britain and Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. Another proposal is an alteration in the statutory declaration made by the Sovereign on his accession. The declaration dates from the time of Charles II and contains the statement that Roman Catholics are superstitious and idolatrous.

Mondale's Failure To Prevail

By William Schneider WASHINGTON — The Demo-crats do not have a candidate. That was the message of last week's split primary results, with Gary Hart winning in Ohio and Indiana and Walter Mondale winning in Maryland and North Carolina. Mr. Mondale was supposed to ad-Mr. Mondale was supposed to administer the coup de grace to Mr. Hart's faltering campaign by sweeping all four states and wrapping up an insurmountable delegate lead. Instead, Super Tuesday II did for Mr. Hart what Super Tuesday I had done for Mr. Mondale on March 13: It beat him alive just when it looked as kept him alive just when it looked as if he was about to go under. Let the record show that, as of last Tuesday, the Republicans do have a candidate. On that day Rouald Rea-gan sewed up the Republican nomi-nation by winning a majority of his party's delegates. And here are the Democrats, faced with an opponent who unites his own party and antagonizes Democrats to an unprecedented degree, still unable to decide who hey are and what they want.

This was not supposed to happen. Democratic leaders were all set to bury Mr. Hart. But the corpse refused to show up. "I intend to be the nominee," Mr. Hart said on Sunday.

Of course most people still expect Mr. Mondale to be the nominee. One recent delegate count gives him 1,528 votes, which is 49 percent of the delegates chosen so far and 439 short of the majority needed for the nomina-tion. Mr. Hart has 887 delegates and Jesse Jackson has 291.

But in order to guarantee a first-ballot nomination Mr. Mondale will have to win an absolute majority of the delegates to be chosen in the next month. Most of the remaining primary states are in the West, which is not good territory for him.

'C'mon, you guys — Gimme a hand, will ya?'

What the contest really demonstrates is that, while Mr. Mondale must be considered the favorite for the nomination, he is a perilously weak candidate. "He has yet to demonstrate that be represents more than 50 percent of the party," says Mr. Hart, who is right about this.

Mr. Hart is not a bad dream that will go away. His attacks on Mr. Mondale have stuck. Whatever you may say about New England and Florida, there happen to be real Democrats in Ohio, and Mr. Mondale did not turn them on — or out.

Can Mr. Mondale be stopped? Mr. Hart and Mr. Jackson would have to form a stop-Mondale coalition and prevent the moormitted delegates, who will probably number about 600 after the primaries are over, from jumping on the Mondale bandwagon nitted delegates always end up voting for somebody, and Mr. Mondale needs only a small proportion of them to put him over the top.

While some are issue activists nuclear freeze enthusiasts, for exam-ple — others are professional politicians who have a strong interest in being on the winning side. If Mr. Mondale looks as if he will be the standard bearer, Democrats with political ambitions of their own will not want to hold out against him.

Mr. Hart's potentially most com-pelling argument is that Mr. Mondale cannot win in November.

It is true that Mr. Hart gets more support from independents and Re-publicans than Mr. Mondale does. But can it be demonstrated that he would defeat Mr. Reagan? Not in any would defeat Mr. Reagan: Not in any current polls. Mr. Reagan is so strong right now that he defeats both men by substantial margins — and Mr. Jackson by a landshide.

In a choice between "a known loser" and "an unknown loser," the par-ty is likely to settle for Mr. Mondale. A recent Gailup Poll suggests that there is only one way out of this dilemma. It shows that, while Mr. Mondale loses to Mr. Reagan by 8 points and Mr. Hart loses by 3, a Mondale-Hart ticket comes out even against a Reagan-Bush ticket. So Mr. Mondale's best chance may be to heal the party's wounds by putting Mr. Hart on the ticket as vice president.

Can that happen?
The fact is that Mr. Hart has only one real issue in his campaign, and that is antipathy toward Mr. Mon-dale's politics — "special interests," "the failed policies of the past." Mr.

Hart wins only by mobilizing anti-Mondale feeling, which is strong among young voters, independents, New Politics liberals and anti-labor conservatives. He did exactly that in Ohio and Indiana, where he campaigned extensively and aggressively against Mr. Mondale. Where he did not campaign very hard, in Maryland and North Carolina, he lost.

Mr. Mondale is an interest politician. He will try to find out what Mr. Hart's and Mr. Jackson's interests are and negotiate with them. But Mr. Hart's and Mr. Jackson's principal interest is to stop Mr. Mondale, and that is something he can hardly nego-tiate. Mr. Hart and Mr. Jackson are issue politicians, and they reject Mr. Mondale's (and the Democratic Party's) traditional way of doing business — with the economy and defense in Mr. Hart's case, with blacks in Mr. Jackson's case. It will be very difficult to buy them off.

In the short run, the prospects for Democratic unity do not look good. None of the candidates can see very far beyond June 5. Sooner or later, however, Mr. Hart and Mr. Jackson will realize that it is not in their interest to sabotage the Democratic ticket.

A Booby Prize for Hart After a Surprising Lapse

WASHINGTON — On the aswill figure prominently in the U.S. dential campaign this fall, Warren Christopher, who was Jimmy Carter's undersecretary of state, raises a plaintive question (IHT, May 8): "Are we destined to endure a dialogue of distraction, aimed at the lowest common denominator and the highest common vulgarity?" In a word, yes, if the dialogue to date, just between the Democratic contenders, is a reasonable test. As distractions, it is hard to beat the issues of who was first in favor of a nuclear freeze, or who would be first to move the U.S. Embassy from Tel

But first prize for vulgarity, so far, ter Mondale for his supposed role in "those days of shame for the United States in the Iranian hostage crisis." The short-lived appearance of this issue in 1984 campaigning illustrates Mr. Christopher's point.

There are lessons to be learned from the hostage crisis, lessons about U.S. power that are worth debating in the context of current foreign policy issues. Ironically, nobody understands them -or used to understand them - better than Gary Hart.

Recognizing that he had gone much too far (but without acknowledging it), Mr. Hart backed down a few days later. He said that when he called his own party's last adminis-tration "weak" and "inept" in those days of "shame," he was only talking "in the context of our need to reform our military institutions and modernize our conventional forces." He had supported the ill-fated rescue mission and all he meant was that "we needed different kinds of equipment and we needed training" for such missions.

In fact, two years earlier the Carter so-called Delta Force to deal with terrorists and hostage-takings, It had created an airlift capability that it had reason to hope would fit almost any foreseeable need. That it failed tragically at Desert One owes something to the awful intricacy of the mission and something to technical problems, interservice rivalry, faulty command — and bad luck.

The Israeli government has said that further withdrawal depends on satisfactory security arrangements for the border. Asked about that, Mr.

Khaddam said Israel used security as a "screen" for territorial expansionism. The alleged aim of the invasion was peace for Galilee, he said; but it

By Philip Geyelin But Mr. Hart is right: There was then, and there remains, plenty of room for improving counterterrorist techniques. Yet there is also no guarantee of success in these matters which raises the larger question of how a democracy deals with adversi-ty. In the heat of the campaign, Mr. Hart has shown us the wrong way. The irony is that, at the time, he was exhibiting the right way, judging by statements provided by his office when I asked about Mr. Hart's recent statement that "Carter-Mondale" was producing "an America held hos-tage to the ayatoliahs of the world."

On Nov. 8, 1979, four days after the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was cent cutback in U.S. energy con-mention of military measures. He said he had discussed the situation with - guess who? - Vice President Mondale, and "it is clear our government is making every diplomatic effort to secure the release of the hostages." A press release later in November offered "six ways to an-swer the ayatolish" through various fuel-conservation measures.

Other statements expressed frustration and outrage over the "insan-ity of the situation." But tuless there is something missing in the material provided by Mr. Hart's office, the senator accepted the helplessness of the U.S. position with admirable fortitude, and issued not one word of criticism of the Carter administration's handling of the affair.

Following the release of the hostages, Mr. Hart co-sponsored a Sen ate resolution expressing "deep appreciation" for the "strenuous efforts" of the Carter administration

Up Close, a More Complicated View of Damascus

By Anthony Lewis

prove relations between Syria and the United States? I asked Abdel Halim Khaddam, vice president in charge of foreign affairs. He answered: "Very simply, the United States should follow an American policy in the Middle East."

The theme is the same being heard nearly everywhere in the Arab world: surprise and bitterness that the United States, a superpower, allows its policy to be dictated by Israel, It is exactly the view expressed by King Hussein, for all the sharp differences petween Jordan and Syria. Here, as there, one senses not the rejection of a U.S. role but the desire for an effective one - a realization that without it there can be no regional peace. Syrian officials tell this story: Five days after Israel invaded Lebanon in June 1982, Ambassador Philip Habib flew here with a letter from President Reagan to Syria's president, Hafez al-

Assad. If Syria agreed to a cease-fire, it said, Israel would start withdrawing at once - and after a pause would continue to a complete withdrawal. President Assad agreed. But the Israeli Army drove on to Beirut.
"When a head of state addresses a letter to another," Mr. Khaddam said, "this means a clear undertaking Otherwise what is the value of [such] messages? This matter played an im-portant part in undermining the credibility of the United States, and prompted us to be cautious in our later discussions with American The U.S. view of that episode is different. The Reagan letter was not an undertaking, American diplomats say, but an idea being tried out. But they say the Syrian government evidently did believe it had been misled. In Lebanon today Syria is working for an effective central government. Mr. Khaddam said the new cabinet of Prime Minister Rashid Karami represented "the best opportunity for internal peace," and he thought it had "the will and intention to end the crisis." But the Syrians, with much face at stake in a Lebanese solution, know it will not be easy to overcome the encrusted antagonisms of the Lebanese communal leaders. Syrian support for a stable, unified Lebanon is consistent with expressed American goals, but here again the deep suspicion of Israel makes mutual understanding difficult. Asked whether the United States could help in Lebanon now. Mr.

Khaddam said it could "press Israel to withdraw, and to stop encouraging some Lebanese parties to continue non, the security and interests of the with the game of the civil war." The Arab world, and the Arab commitlatter phrase apparently referred to ments of Lebanon. On the Iran-Iraq war, Mr. Khaddam said Syria had warned from the Israel's contacts with extreme rightwing elements in the Christian Phalange militia, which resisted the forbeginning that the war would be "demation of the new unity government.

structive to both Iran and Iraq, and harmful to the region." In his words there may even have been a hint, a nuance of changed Syrian percep-tion. Asked whether Syria continued to support Iran, he said that support was linked to longstanding differ-ences with the Saddam Hussein government in Iraq. Then he reiterated that Syria "denounced the war." There are in fact good reasons for President Assad to fear an actual victory by Iran, as opposed to the bleeding of Iraq. Par from favoring Islamic fundamentalism, he has ruthlessly suppressed it in Syria; the army killed 20,000 people in Hama two years ago up there, and the wrecked houses and mosques can still be seen. Moreover, Iranian revolutionary guards in Lebanon are a threat to the stability Syria desires.

The Reagan administration has often denounced Syria as a Soviet pawn. No Western diplomat I met here believes that. "The relationship with the Soviet Union is no more than a cohabitation of convenience," based on Syria's need for weapons to counter Israel's great power, one diplomat said.

Up close, other views of Syria also turn out to be too simple. Mr. Assad's iron control has rested on the military. Yet people say he has relied also on bourgeois support; one spoke of "the merchant-military complex." Today, there are signs that the Age of Assad may be drawing to a close — but that is another subject.

The KGB Moves Up — and Back

BRUSSELS — Thirty-two years after the great fright of the "doctors" plot," the Soviet secret police has uncovered another conspiracy. In 1952, what was then known as the NKVD rounded up a group of doctors, many with obviously Jewish names, and accused them of trying to assassmate Stalin. In 1984, the KGB, successor of the NKVD, has, according to Tass, "foiled a large-scale operation planned by Andrei Sakharov and his wife with the help of the U.S.

Embassy in Moscow. Tass asserted that Professor Sakharov — in forced exile in Gorki, 250 miles (400 kilometers) from Moscow, for the last four years -was about to start a hunger strike while his wife, Yelena Bonner, would seek refuge in the U.S. Embassy. The aim would be to organize Mrs. Bonner's escape to the West under the "false pretext of health reasons" so that she could become "one of the leaders of the anti-Sovinow been dredged up once again, to be used May 4 in a Tass dispatch. Some of the doctors involved in the fictional 1952 plot were rehabilitated posthumously. The Sakharovs themselves are in poor health. When the KGB decided to make the world aware of the new "plot," Mr. Sakha-rov had been on a hunger strike for 48 hours and Mrs. Bonner had been accused of auti-Soviet propaganda and assigned to forced residence in Gorki, where she apparently has also begun a protest last.

The Stalinist style of the discovery of the "Sakharov-CIA plot" is another sign of the growing role of the KGB in the Soviet leadership. Not long ago Viktor Chebrikov, the present head of the KGB, was one among several vice presidents of the KGB and a candidate member of the Central Committee. In February 1982 he was named one of the two first vice presidents, and in December he became head man. In November 1983 he was promoted to the rank of general of the army, and in December he became a candidate member of the Politburo. His desigmission of state secrets." Those nation as a full member of the Polit-

15 years as head of the KGB. Konstantin Chernenko began his career in a KGB-linked organization, the Frontier Guards. There are strong indications that he played a role in the political police that terrerized the Ukraine in the 1930s. Former KGB generals in the present Politburo include Geidar Aliyev, the first deputy prime minister, and Eduard Chevanadze, the boss of Georgia. General Vitaly Fe-dorchuk, a former head of the KGB. where he succeeded Mr. Andropov, is now minister of the interior.

Clearly, the KGB has reverted to an old habit and decided to break all contacts between what remains of an almost totally destroyed dissidence and Western journalists and diplomats. The Sakharovs are not the only victims. Roy Medvedev, who calls himself the "only dissident known in the West who still lives in Moscow," is no longer at-

Retrospect On an Upset: Nov. 7, 1984

Mondale has left polisters and pusi-dits staggering and stammering.

What caused the unprecedented
"sectional split" in which the Resi-gan-Bush ticket carried most of the South and West, and Mondale-Bumpers swept the East and Mid-west? Why are we now scrambling to guess the Mondale cabinet? I suppose we should have divined back in May the factors that seem so plain on the morning after Election Day. morning after Election Day.

1. The Bumpers decision. That put Humpty Dumpty together again. Mr. Mondale realized that Mr. Hart had made himself anathema to labor, and that a Mondale-Hart ticket could easily be attacked as hypocritical. How to attract the new idea liberals without alienating the South or the AFL-CIO? Answer: an attractive, littleknown liberal, Senator Dale Bumpers of Arkansas.

2. The gender-gap ambush. Never in presidential history have we seen such a difference in the voting behavior of men and women. Conservative women deserted Mr. Reagan in droves - partly because of disagree-ment on abortion and ERA, mainly because of lear of war and the conviction that Mr. Reagan did not understand working women's needs.

3. That minor stumble. Some say it was only the nosebleed, others point to the bad cold, but the age-and-health issue was suddenly injected into the campaign. 4. The absence of an escape hatch

In 1980, Democrats who disdained finning Carter but distrusted Mr. Reagan had a way of demonstrating their independence by voting for John Anderson. This year, that crowd went, two out of three, for Mondale-Bumpers (mainly for Mr. Bumpers). 5. Wall Street's black September. The steady upticking of the interest-rate clock combined with a sudden surge of inflation; that left the administration unable to pass the buck to the Feu's tight-money policy. Aggravated by the expectation of a Reagan victory and a new recession in 1985, investors started dumping, leading to what Treasury Secretary Donald Regan called a "brief period of profit-taking, building a base for another protracted advance," and what the economist Martin Feldstein called simply "the Crash." 6. The straggle-in of the blue-collar defectors. To win in the industrial states, Mr. Reagan had to keep twothirds of the blue-collar workers who voted against Mr. Carter in 1980, Labor delivered for Mr. Mondale in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and Mr. Reagan was limited to 30 percent of

7. The normalization of the Jewish voter. In 1980, many supporters of incipient betrayal from a secondterm Carter and turned to Mr. Reagan. But he delivered three years of Begin-bashing before seeing the light; and the rimors that a second-

8. The underdog's victory in debate. In the three debates of 1984, Mr. Reagan did not do as well as widely expected. His opponent, always respectful, seemed to humor him: When Mr. Reagan twisted a fact, Mr. Mondale's "there you go again" was especially effective. As usual, the conventional wisdom of last May did not hold up in several areas. The increased registration of blacks did not win the South for the Democrats because it was largely offset by backlash and the increased effectiveness of the pro-Reagan evangelicals. The hostility of the Russians was turned into a Reagan advantage by his TV spots asking, "Why does the Kremlin want you to vote against President Reagan?

It is all behind us now. If the White House had acted on these warnings in . " the spring, right-wing commentators would not now be forced to speculate

William Tuohy's report ends: "Visitors spend the night in the guest hotel in Son La, and in the morning may tour the French prison that once held such Communist Party figures as Le Duan, now the Party leader, and Truong Chinh, his deputy. Squeezing inside one of the under-ground punishment cells, the visitor begins to understand the Viet Minh's hatred for French colonial rule."

I live in the 13th arrondissement of Paris, which is heavily populated by people who have fled Vietnam. It is extraordinary that these people who. according to Mr. Tuchy, hated the French so much, came to live with their tormentors and are still now trying to join us by the thousands. I have never heard of an exodus like that of the "boat people" taking place during French colonial rule. If Mr. Tuchy had asked his hosts to allow him to visit their prisons and concentration camps he would have found these camps far more populated than they ever were during French colonial rule. The country is one large prison. If the Vietnamese could choose between French colonial rule and the current regime, there is no doubt in my mind as to what their

"Body and Soul," however, is a nostalgia cocktail with an added shot of trivia. There are pop, Latin, rock, soul and beloop influences, but the cover design is the key. The red-screened black and white photo of Jackson wearing a beret, holding a saxophone and a cigarette, is a tribute to the Blue Note line of jazz recordings that flourished in the 1950s, when owners Alfred Lion and Francis Wolff would haul into the studio whomever happened to be hanging out in front of Birdland at 4 A.M.

NYSE Prices Drop in Slow Day

NEW YORK — Prices on the New York Stock Exchange, restrained by investor concerns that interest rates are going to go higher don't know what that could be." Investors are restrained by worries that interest rates, up sharply the past month, are going to go even higher because of heavy borrowing needs. The government, faced with a $180-billion deficit, is having to borrow heavily. And Wall Street is reluctant to buy its bonds.

Paul A. Volcker, the Federal Reserve chairman, said the economy appears to be growing strongly despite high interest rates. Private borrowing has increased sharply in recent weeks because of the strong economy.

Congress has stalled in its efforts to cut the federal budget deficit and the Treasury's bor-rowing needs are running into conflict with those of the private sector.

Amex to Stimulate Trading By Doubling Index Contract Its Capital

FUTURES AND OPTIONS

By H.J. MAIDENBERG New York Times Service

The American Stock Exchange, in an effort to stimulate trading in its Major Market Index options, plans to double the size of the stock index contract. Traders will thus get more leverage for their premium dollar.

Index options give the investor the right to buy or sell short the value of the basket of shares at a fixed price within a specified period. The premium is the price paid for this right.

The exchange's move reflects the radical changes that have swept the index options market in the last year. When the Amex introduced its Major Market Index options on April 29, 1983, few doubted that it would be a success. After all, its underlying 20stock index, known by its ticker symbol, XMI, correlated closely to the 30-share Dow Jones industrial stock average, long the standard measure of market

But while trading in XMI options has grown steadily, it still cannot match the volume of the Chicago Board Options Exchange's Standard & Poor's 100 option. The Chicago option, which was introduced in February of last year, consists of a "home-made" abstract of 100 blue chip stocks in the S&P 500 index, which is the average followed by professional portfolio managers. The latest open interest figures, for example, show the S&P 100 options, or OEX, with 828,693 open contracts, compared with the XMI's 68,394. Last Friday, the Chicago options traded 388,208 contracts; the Amex, 29,095.

'Amex XMI's biggest problem is that it doesn't have a convenient index futures to spread against.'

"Amex's XMI is an excellent surrogate for the Dow Jones average, but its biggest problem is that it doesn't have a convenient index futures to spread against," said John M. Blin, partner in Shatkin Investment Inc., a large Chicago house that serves only

"The Amex options may be just the thing for the average investor, but people with large index options positions must be able, often on a moment's notice, to lay off with comparable

The ability to spread risk may also be why the latest open interest total of the New York Futures Exchange's index options, based on the Big Board composite index, is 118,889 contracts and its volume, last Friday, 21,000 contracts. The NYFE also trades index futures on the same average.

Also, Mr. Blin noted, the Chicago's OEX index options benefit from that exchange's vast pool of market makers. "The floor traders on the CBOE may often resemble a mob of crazy people, but they do provide OEX traders with extraordinary liquidity,"

But Paul G. Stevens, executive vice president of the Amex, said that price moves, not volatility, are the chief factor in determining the soundness of an options market. "Our specialist system, the same kind that we use in our equities and stock options markets, provides traders with efficient order execution at equitable prices," he said.

The fact that the Chicago exchange handles a higher percentage of floor trades in its OEX options than does the Amex, which depends more on outside investor business, was one geason for their higher volume and open interest, Mr. Stevens said.

Joseph B. Stefanelli, Amex's options marketing chief, noted that New York is more of an investment supermarker than "People here have a much broader range of investments to choose from," he said. "This is one reason why we are thinking of doubling the size of our XMI index options."

Fiat SpA To Increase

Compiled by Our Stuff From Dispatcher TURIN, Italy — First SpA, par-ent company of Italy's largest private industrial group, reported Monday that its profit in 1983 nearly doubled and amounced plans to increase capital about six-

Noting that its automotive group swing to a profit from a loss, Fiat said it earned 214 billion lire (about $126 million) in 1983, up from carnings of 111 billion lire in 1982. Revenue rose 6.6 percent to 21.98 trillion line last year from 20.62 trillion line in 1982.

The company said consolidated group profit for 1983 will be not less than that of the parent company. This would represent a big in-crease from 1982 consolidated profit of 137 billion lire.

The financing plan calls for a three-part operation of bonus and rights issues that would increase the capital of Fiat SpA to about 2.02 trillion lire from 337.5 billion lire. Company officials said the proposed rights issue would be the argest offer ever made on the Mi-

Proceeds of the rights issue would go towards financing investments of 8,000 billion lire planned for the next three years, Fiat said. Company officials said Fiat would invest 6,000 billion lire in fixed assets and 2,000 billion lire in research and development. About 3,500 billion lire would be invested in the group's carmaking plants and 800 billion lire in the Iveco utility vehicle subsidiary

In a first step, capital would be doubled to 675 billion lire by dou-bling the nominal value of existing shares to 1,000 lire each from 500

This will be followed by a one-for-one free issue redoubling capi-tal to 1.35 trillion line. Shareholders would be asked to subscribe a onefor-one rights issue based on the first stage of enlarged capital at a price of 1,130 lire a share.

After drawing down more than I rillion lire from reserves to cover the increase in nominal value of the shares and the bonus issue, remaining reserves would still exceed the increased capital of the company.

Value of Dividends Divides Experts

Payout Cuts Can Prove Of Benefit to Investors

By Eric N. Berg New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Dividends may not be the stuff NEW YORK — Dividends may not be the sturn of suspense novels, but so far this year they have made headlines. A reinvigorated Chrysler Corp. reinstated its quarterly payout, American Telephone & Telegraph Co. threatened to can its dividend for the first time ever, two big utilities — Long Island Lighting Co. and Public Service Co. of New Hampshire — haited their common stock dividends and General Motors Corp. surprised Wall Street by raising its quarterly payout 25

But whether dividends are good for shareholders is not altogether clear. While some old-line companes, such as General Electric Co., have paid dividends for years, rapid-growth, high-tech concerns, such as Apple Computer Inc., often do not pay dividends at all. Nor is the meaning of dividend changes easy to decipher.

A dividend cut, for example, could be good news if a company is reinvesting funds in promising ventures. Moreover, as the economy changes to high-technology-oriented industry and as companies spend more on research and development, a trend to leaner dividends could become more pronounced. Consequently, the investing public may have to depend less on dividends for total returns.

In fact, there is a growing sentiment that the role of dividends should be played down and that cash payouts, because they are taxed more highly than long-term capital gains, are a costly way to compensate shareholders.

"Why firms continue to pour out vast quantities of dividends in the face of these tax differentials is one of the great puzzles of our time," said Merton H. Miller, the Leon Carroll Marshall Professor of Finance at the University of Chicago

For more than two decades, academicians, Wall Street professionals and corporate executives have struggled to understand the role of dividends in PARIS - In what was widely viewed as a renewed challenge to the French government's austerity policy, a sir-in by workers at a Citroën auto plant spread Monday to two other company plants.

The sit-in began Friday at the Aulnay-sous-Bois plant of Citroen, which is a division of the Peugeot SA automobile group.
Several violent incidents were reported Monday at the company's Nanterre plant, and the company asked riot police to clear the plant there, at Levallois and Auinay.

Union officials led by Henri Krasucki, general secretary of the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor, or CGT, said they were protesting Citroen's plan to fire 2,937 workers at Aulnay as part of the division's effort to cut its 43,000-member work force by about 6,000.

In March the company had announced that 3,144 workers had agreed to early retirement and that it wanted to eliminate another 2,937 jobs through attrition and

"But our studies and efforts showed conclusively that there was no way to handle the jobs in question by layoffs or other formula. . . We had to resort to dismissals," a ers in ailing sectors. We want [the government policy] to stop," a CGT official said. Meantime, Pierre Bérégovoy, minister of social affairs, said Monday that he had invited union, company and industry leaders to talks at the ministry on Tuesday and Wednesday. He reaffirmed the government's commitment to laying off workers in problem sectors of French industry, notably automobiles. He said the layoffs were "indispensable" to assuring the industry's future com-

"The legitimate interests of workers concerned" also had to be protected, he added.

Complicating the talks is the fact that the French Democratic Labor Confederation, or CFDT, which is backing the sit-ins, wants to begin talks with the government for a 35-hour workweek. Autoworkers currently work a 39-hour week.

A Citroen spokesman said the company "would have difficulty surviving in three years" if the 6,000 jobs are not cut at six of the company's plants, including Aul-

Peugeot SA, which acquired Citroën in 1974, said on April 26 that the group's loss widened to 25 billion francs ($294.6 million) last year from 2.1 billion in 1982. refusal to grant licenses to other companies to produce replacement parts for its vehicles constitutes an anticompetitive practice. Ford con-tends that the parts are covered by copyrights.

After conducting an investiga-tion, the Office of Fair Trading concluded in March that Ford was pursuing an anticompetitive practice. The office said it referred the case to the commission because it has not received an acceptable re-

BEIJING — China's industrial output rose 11.7 percent to 211.75 billion yuan ($97.4 billion) in the first four months of this year from year earlier, the State Statistical Bureau said Monday.

Both the heavy and light sectors reported the same growth rate, the bureau said. The leadership is trying to readjust the imbalance caused by high heavy industrial growth under past policies, which caused overcapacity and strained infrastructure.

Nissan Sees U.S. Profit in '85

DETROIT — Nissan Motor Manufacturing Corp. USA, which currently builds small pickup trucks at a plant in Smyrna, Tennessee, expects to be profitable by 1985, with its new car assembly operation contributing substantially when it goes on line next year, Jerry Benefield, manufacturing vice president, said Monday.

Spain Awaits Break in Rumasa Case Extradition of Ruiz-Mateos Viewed as Important Step

By John Darnton

New York Times Service MADRID — The eyes of Jose Maria Ruiz-Mateos, the financier who left Spain after his shaky business empire was expropriated last year by the government, stare from the cover of almost every weekly magazine here.

For months, the Spanish press has been closely following his complicated travels abroad, a story filled with declarations and denunciations and frequent disappearances and sightings from Europe to

However, now that Spain has de-cided to seek the extradition of Mr. Ruiz-Mateos from West Germany, there is a sense that the chase was nearing an end. Mr. Ruiz-Mateos, 53, was arrested on April 25 with the help of interpol when he passed through immigration at the Frankfurt air-port after stepping off a flight from the United States. He is being held in Preugesheim prison in Frank-The former president and founder of Rumasa faces a variety of charges arising from his business dealings when he headed the holding company, which was said to be Spain's largest private enterprise. The charges include fraud, embez-zlement, falsification of documents and nonpayment of withheld taxes and social welfare benefits.

He has also been charged with assulting the head of state, King Juan Carlos I. This crime, punishable by six months to 12 years in views he gave earlier this year while living in London.

In December, Spain's Constitu tional Court ruled that the seizure which was done by royal decree for maximum speed and surprise, did not contravene the country's con-stitution. The decision cleared the way for negotiations on the resale of Rumasa companies to private owners. So far, 17 companies, including Banco Atlantico, the largest of the 20 Rumasa banks, have been sold back to the private sector. Rumasa officials said they expect to sell back many other companies by this summer, including 17 banks, a hotel chain, a supermarket chain, three insurance companies and a champagne company.

so. The odds are that his memories will put him in a mental hospital. "The Lives of Riley Chance" is not exactly a novel about reincarnation; rather, reincarna-tion is a device used by the author to explore the problems of evil, death and human rela-tionships. This novel asks the question: How can we get through life while inflicting minimal damage? Its answer is inconclusive, but it sug-gests that we should try to be as kind as we can to one another — though such efforts are likely to be misunderstood. The book is not worth reading for that message alone, but it is worth-while for the righty elaborate package in which the message is embodied.

Chance's three lives are chronicled in three weeks of interrogation (actually monologues) taken down in 1980. So far, in the lives he remembers. Riley Chance has not managed to get past his 20s. He has always been someone who "wanted to fix things for everybody." In pursuit of that goal, he has become a murderer, a thief and a liar without getting into much trouble, except in his own conscience. The trouble begins, and he becomes a fugitive from justice, when the third war of his three incarnations comes up — Vietnam — and he decades that he doesn't want to be a soldier again.

The first time around, Kenny Ezra finds the answer to his problems (an unsatisfactory answer) in violence. It is a violent time; workers are organizing into unions and meeting armed THE LIVES OF RILEY CHANCE resistance. Kenny's violence is not part of the By Robert Bausch. 292 pp. $14.95.

class struggle, however, but personal — he kills a man who molested his sister. The next time, the background is the Depression, and Jack Pitt resorts to deception and subterfuge (robbing the pour box in his local church) to help an unemployed neighbor.
His downfall comes (although he doesn't I T took three lifetimes for Riley Chance to learn his lesson. Then he biew it. Robert really understand this) when he becomes in-volved in violence to help a friend — the mode of behavior worked out in his previous existence. He starts a barroom brawl and ends up paralyzed from the neck down. This segment concludes with his development of an ingenious (and ghastly) scheme for committing suicide in a hospital bed when he can move nothing but his head.

The third life, which continues to the end of the book, develops the motif of noninvolvement. Riley Chance becomes aware of his previous existences for the first time and concindes that kindness may be "the most useless of all human behavior." He tells his father (the third in a series of fathers) that "there isn't any such thing as rightness." and tries to build a life denoted of magningful human contacts. An act devoid of meaningful human contacts. An act of kindness is his downfall. More specifically, he runs into trouble in this incarnation because he is trying once again to rectify an unresolved problem from his last incarnation. But this time it doesn't matter, he has come to realize, through three incarnations, that evil is often rewarded in this world, goodness is often misunderstood and punished — or perhaps that "good" and "evil" are simply noises that we make about a much more complex reality. "Nobody loses all the time" are the book's final, mutedly optimistic words.

If Robert Bausch has set out to write a 20thcentury response to Voltaire's "Candide," he has done a fair job of it. He manages a complex set of symbols, incidents, characters and motifs in a tightly organized form, imposing coherence on a wealth of material that could easily become chaotic. His book has a special resonance that continues in the mind long after you finish the final page. It may be the resonance of the 20th century — a chronicle of what has happened to the human soul in this dark and turbulent time.

WASHINGTON — The Unit- Medals if they keep swimming in our hemisphere." problem. It doesn't want the Russians in El Salvador, but it does want them in Los Angeles.

The Soviets, according to President Reagan, are running all over Central America, but they don't want to send one weight lifter to the Olympics.

The State Department is now working day and night to reverse this situation. "What do you plan to do about the problem?" I asked one of the American diolomats working on We're in touch with Mos-Buchwald cow now and our message to them is that we have no objection to them testing us in Los Angeles, but we take a serious view of them competing with us in Central America.

The Russians say the reason they won't come to Los Angeles is that it's too dangerous for their

"We're trying to tell them they've read our signals all wrong. Where they are in physical danger is in Nicaragua and Cuba. They have nothing to fear if they show up in California."

"I'm not clear why Ronald Reagan is unnerved about the Soviets being in El Salvador, but is not afraid of them in Los Angeles."

"The reason is quite simple. Los Angeles is farther away from Washington than El Salvador is from Houston. The president is very hurt that the Soviets have decided to boycott the Olympics because they feel they won't get enough protection here. Russian lives are sacred to Mr. Reagan when they are in the United States. At the same time, we have informed Mr. Chernenko the Soviets are not going to win any Gold ever heard. "Maybe the Soviets are retaliating because we refused to go to their Olympics in 1980."

"We had a very good reason for not going to Moscow then. They invaded Afghanistan and we wanted to send a strong message that we wouldn't stand for this outlaw be-havior. Just because we wouldn't go to their Olympics is no reason for them not to come to ours."

"I understand the other reason the Russians decided not to come to Los Angeles was because of the smog. Have you been able to assure them that there would not be any smog in Los Angeles if they agreed

There's always smog in Los Augeles. The Soviets damn well know that. We consider this excuse a red herring. If you want the truth we suspect that one of the reasons they are not coming is because they will have to be tested for steroids. Everyone knows their athletes are full

Radcliffe's Identity Crisis at Harvard

By Fox Butterfield New York Times Service

C AMBRIDGE, Massachusetts — Ask Monica Gorman, a freshman from Los Angeles, or Rosemarie Sabatino, a senior from West Virginia, where they go to college, and they answer, Harvard,

They live in Harvard housing, go to Harvard classes and will receive Harvard degrees.

But technically they are students at Radchiffe College, whose president and trustees insist Radcliffe remains independent despite two decades of gradual integregation with Harvard University.

The meshing of the two schools has been so effective that the proportion of male and female students is almost equal in this year's freshman class, even though Harvard once had an effective quota of four student men for every woman.
But Radcliffe's increasing affiliation with

Harvard poses two questions. Is Radcliffe still a true college, an independent institution dedicated to women's education, or does it exist in name only? The women who run Radcliffe, Matina S. Horner, the president, and the deans and trustees, say the school is more vital than ever. They cite a new counseling program for undergraduates, the Schlesinger Library on the History of Women and the Bunting Institute to promote research by women.

A Radcliffe graduate on Harvard's faculty offered a blunter assessment: "The library and the institute are wonderful, but the rest of Radcliffe is now a Harvard coeducational institution. It's gone."

There is no need, she contended, for Radciiffe to have a president, deans and a board of trustees. Harvard does not eliminate those positions because it is afraid of being charged with sexism, the professor said, and besides, she added, the Radcliffe name is still important for fund-raising.

The integration of the two schools took place through a series of steps: In 1963, for the first time, Harvard degrees were awarded to Radcliffe students; in 1971, all housing became coeducational; in 1975, a joint admissions program was adopted, and in 1977, the schools signed an overall accord that codified the change problem for many female undergraduates who go through four years at Harvard with-out participating in Radcliffe programs or

Raddiffe's new role has created an identity

"It almost doesn't exist for me, it's as if I go to Harvard," said Gorman. "I know Radcliffe is there and it has things I could get involved in, but it's just like another extracurricular activity.

She was upset recently when she was assigned to live next year in North House, one of three residences in what had been Radcliffe's quadrangle. Most students prefer to live in the Harvard houses closer to the center of the university.

Confusion over Radcliffe's role is not new. Ever since it was founded in 1879 as the Harvard "Annex" to educate "properly qualified young women," its identity has been debated. Lucy Paton, an 1892 graduate, later recalled that "one of the burning questions of the death of the death of the first state of the state. the day was that of the relationship of Harvard to the Annex."

But today. Horner asserts: "While some people say we're not a traditional college. I say we are. We just happen to do things in an

Horner, a psychologist and a Bryn Mawr graduate, says it is important to remember that Radcliffe never had its own faculty. From the beginning its classes were taught by Harvard professors, who until World War II were paid extra for teaching Radcliffe classes. It is also significant, Horner says, that under the 1977 agreement female students are technically admitted to Radcliffe, or as a Radcliffe brochure puts it, "Women undergraduates are admitted to and enrolled in Radcliffe College and thereby also enrolled in Harvard College." She says it does not bother her that Radcliffe students say they go to Harvard. "It's what we beat our heads against the wall for years to achieve," Horner said, referring to the fact that Radcliffe students now have full access to Harvard's facilities. Horner and other Radcliffe officials say they are particularly proud of the Schlesin Library and the Bunting Institute. The library, with 25,000 books and 550 manuscript collections, is the largest in the world devoted entirely to women's history, according to Patricia King, its director. Among its holdings are the papers of Susan B. Anthony, Julia Child and Betty Friedan.

The Bunting Institute, founded in 1960, now offers fellowships to 43 female scholars, scientists, artists and writers a year. "It's a wonderful place, with its all-female environment tremendously supportive," said Gillian Hart, an assistant professor of economics at Boston University who is doing research this year on agrarian problems in Indonesia.

But only about 10 percent of the library's 5,000 users last year were Raddiffe under-graduates, and the fellows at the institute have little to do with students. Moreover, only about one out of eight Radcliffe stu-dents actively participate in the college's undergraduate programs, according to Philippa Bovet, the associate dean.

Perhaps Radcliffe's greatest success in its integregation with Harvard, in the view of Raddiffe officials, has been the sharp rise in the number of female students. In 1973, before the joint admissions policy ended sexbased quotas, there were 1,452 undergraduate women and 4,686 undergraduate men.

This year there are 2,677 women and 3,860 men, with an even narrower difference in the freshman class.

"I feel like a squeezed lemon," the 81year-old concert artist whispered to the orchestra conductor as he acknowledged a 12-minute standing ovation by a Municipal Theater au-dience in Santiago. The event marked a reconciliation between the pianist and the 10-year-old military government. Associates of Arran, who lives in New York and obtained U.S. citizenship in 1978, had often said he would never play in Chile as long as President Augusto Pinochet remained in power.
